

Teaching is not easy. It is hard work, with rewards that are life altering. In the Going Beyond folder for Chapter 19 at EffectiveTeaching.com are some reminders of your value and worth to the world.

The children of the world thank you for being a teacher.

There is a worldwide shortage of qualified teachers.
323 million children worldwide do not go to school.
Sadly, most will never go to school.

Everyday 50,000 people, mostly children, die from starvation.

Yet,
Deep in the jungle
of Cambodia,
the seventh poorest country in the world,
sits a village called Mean Reth.

It is reachable by car until the monsoon rains come
May to November.

It is infested with malaria.

Yet,
There sits a school.

It is the first real school these children have ever seen.

They receive a structured curriculum.
They are served one meal a day.

There is no electricity.

Yet,
They receive instruction from three teachers who are paid $30 a month and receive free housing.

Because of your validation of our work,
our nonprofit, The First Days of School Foundation
www.NewTeacher.com
was able to build and now sustains this school.

We believe each child is worth educating.

Their smiles remind us of our significance and value to their lives and to the world.
